OUR PURPOSE

Why is there a need for such an organization?

In a relatively short period of time, free zones have become important catalysts for economic growth. Yet, few efforts have been made to create a forum that could successfully bring these diverse entities together in order to exchange different views, experience and knowledge.

As such, the performance of free zones has been somewhat mixed. However, in many markets, including the US, UAE, China and select Asian and South American countries, free zones have been extremely successful. To ensure the sustainability and the continuous success of the free zone model, such experience needs to be more widely shared, and international standards and best practices encouraged.
